Each year, hundreds of students in New Jersey with intellectual and developmental disabilities graduate from school and transition to the adult service system. This transition often comes with many questions from individuals and their families. The New Jersey Division of Developmental Disabilities' (DDD) Office of Transition to Adult Life and Employment is reaching out to share information about resources available to schools and community organizations, and students with disabilities and their families that can help!

Attached is a welcome letter for school-based transition and special education coordinators, and below are links to some of our resources, which can also be found on the Transition to Adult Life webpage.
